Fife Coastal Path

The Fife Coastal Path is a journey of discovery. Designated by Scottish Natural Heritage as one of Scotland's Great Trails the path is an absolute joy every step of the way as it stretches 81 miles from the Forth Estuary in the south, to the Tay Estuary in the north.

The path begins at North Queensferry with spectacular views of the estuary, the iconic Forth Bridges and the Edinburgh skyline. The walking is relatively straightforward, but the terrain is fascinating with evidence of lava flows and limestone strata containing marine fossils. Dysart Harbour and the Harbourmaster's House are highlights as you make your way through the 7th century Royal Burgh. Cultural heritage, historic monuments, quaint villages, valued nature reserves, volcanic plugs and Fife's only working fishing harbour are just some of the gems decorating the path as you continue to St Andrews and your journey's end at Newport-on-Tay.

Clifftop walking, woodland, abandoned railway and of course gorgeous grassy paths through golden sand dunes, combine to deliver an incredible walking experience as you travel through the Kingdom of Fife. Always charming, at times challenging, the Fife Coastal Path and the warm Scottish welcome of its hosts, will remain long in the memory of the walker.

Essential Info

Length	4- 7 nights
Full Route Length	81 miles / 130 km
Shortest Break	34 miles / 55 km

Grade

Easy to Moderate

This is a mainly flat coastal walk and can be completed by people with limited walking experience who have a reasonable level of fitness.

The Fife Coastal Path has high tide alternative paths in places. However, some sections of the route are not passable at high tide and you will have to wait until the tide recedes and the path is clear. One hour after high tide should suffice. Check tide times before setting out.

Terrain: Mainly flat walking along the edge of the coastal plateau. Some road sections, which aren't very busy as well as forest tracks and disused railway line. A couple of sea cliffs, and a golf course or two. Follow safety signs and keep alert to what golfers around you are doing.

What's it like underfoot? On the whole the paths are well defined and maintained, but at times a bit sandy. Walking in soft sand on the beach can get tiring, however there's usually a parallel path further inland.

There are one or two sections with stepping stones. Following high tide, the ground can be muddy or slippery in places.

How much up & down? Not very much at all. Most days are relatively flat. However, there are one or two raised beaches to step up onto.

Signposting: Generally good.

Navigation: Pretty straightforward. Pay attention to the alternative paths at high tide. Near golf courses, keep to the path and stay away from greens and fairways.

Route

North Queensferry to Burntisland

Your journey begins by the Waterloo Well also known as Napoleon Well at the bottom of 'The Brae' on Ferryhill Road. Immediately we have a history lesson and our first taste of Scots dialect. A brae is a Lowland Scots word for the slope or brow of a hill. The well, shaped like Napoleon's hat, was built to commemorate Wellington's victory over Napoleon at Waterloo in 1815.

At the Scottish Wildlife Trust Nature Reserve by Carlingnose Point look out for the magenta-coloured bloody cranesbill, burnet saxifrage and best of all dropwort, rarely seen in Scotland. Out at sea stand the remains of the old pier, a home now for nesting birds.

Woodland leads to Inverkeithing and St David's Harbour. From here the path hugs the coastline to Dalgety Bay. Once a fishing village the old Dalgety Bay made way for the new town in the 1960's. All that remains of the old town is the ruin of St Bridget's Kirk. In summer, terns can be observed plunge diving for fish in the bay. Eyes are drawn out to Inchcolm Island with its 12th century Abbey before turning inland and on to Aberdour.

Beyond Hawkcraig Point and the expansive Silversands Bay there is more woodland. This stretch is popular with botanists and bird watchers and is home to the impressive Starley Burn Falls. Once out the woods, a short section of urban walking leads to Burntisland. Look out for the seals basking on the rocks.

Burntisland to Leven

Leaving Burntisland, the path remains on the road for a time before rejoining the shoreline at Kinghorn. The Fife Coast and Countryside Trust were keen for the path to be, as far as possible, accessible at all states of the tide. Being too close to the shore here would result in the path being under water at high tide. Fortunately, you remain rewarded with fine views to the shore. Keep an eye out for the monument marking the place where Alexander III died in 1286.

Beyond Kinghorn on to Kirkcaldy you walk through coastal grassland. Rockrose, agrimony and wild clary all grow here. Many rocks here are the product of lava flows following the eruption of the Binn Hill volcano around 300 million years ago. Layers of limestone sit beneath the lava flows and hold fossils of sea life from a time when Scotland, then at the Equator, had a tropical climate.

Leaving Kirkcaldy behind you reach the picturesque village of Dysart, whose history dates back to beginning of Christianity in Scotland. At the foot of Hot Pot Wynd stands the Harbourmaster's House. Now a Coastal Visitor Centre, bistro and home to Fife Coast and Countryside Trust.

The final stretch towards Leven initially skirts woodland carpeted in spring with anemone, lesser celandine and primrose before reaching the famous Wemyss Caves. The caves are decorated with Pictish markings dating back to between AD500 and AD900. The path then follows the old railway line into Buckhaven ahead of your arrival at the golden sands of Leven Links.

Leven to Anstruther

Leven and Shell Bay are linked by the sandy shores of Largo Bay. A beautiful 7 mile stretch of beach punctuated in the middle by the pretty village of Lower Largo. Sanderlings, oystercatchers, curlews and ringed plovers can all be enjoyed along this stretch of coast. As can common seals and the larger, 'roman nosed' grey. If you're fortunate, you may even catch a glimpse of bottlenose dolphins. The path skirts the sands and is bordered with wildflowers such as purple milk vetch, rest harrow and lady's bedstraw.

From Shell Bay the path climbs a series of raised beaches to Kinraig, illustrating the varying sea levels through the ages. From here you are rewarded with stunning views of Earlsferry Bay and beyond. Elie to Anstruther proves great walking over the grassy links with plenty of sites of interest. Elie Ness Lighthouse and Sauchar Point Watch Tower both deserve time spent there. Onwards and the path turns a little rougher as you approach Ardross Castle and beyond there Newark Castle ahead of the village of St Monans with its magnificent windmill.

Out from St Monans and only Pittenweem stands between you and Anstruther, but take your time, there's much to see. In Particular St Fillan's Cave. Thought to be where St Fillan lived whilst converting the Picts to Christianity in the 7th century.

Anstruther to St Andrews

Please note there are tidal points between Crail and St Andrews where you may have to wait until the tide recedes and the path is clear. Please check tide times before setting off.

Heading first for Crail, the path follows the rough, grassy shoreline which is uneven in places with some rocky stepping-stones to negotiate. Best then to stop and stand still as you look out to the Isle of May. Consider having a rest day here and take a boat trip out to the island.

Midway between Anstruther and Crail are the fascinating Caiplie Caves. Eroded over time by weather and sea, the caves were once part of a sea cliff. Take care if observing them as several years ago one of the smaller caves collapsed without warning. This boulder-strewn coast is awash with wildflowers and shrubs providing cover for nesting birds such as whitethroat and sedge warbler.

Take time to savour Crail harbour before following a mixed terrain of tarmac roads and rocky shoreline as you head for Kingsbarns. Kilminning Wildlife Reserve with its migratory birds is a highlight of this section. At low tide Kingsbarns beach will provide plenty of wildlife interest also.

From here the walk to St Andrews is along a lonely stretch of coast, rough in places and occasionally muddy. Wading birds are common here. Eider and sometimes shelduck can be seen. Knapweed, campions and vetches provide colour. Although rough underfoot in places this stretch of coast is both beautiful and fascinating. Look out for the impressive pink sandstone Buddo Rock and the Rock and Spindle by St Andrews Bay.

St Andrews to Newport-on-Tay

Your first five miles or so out of St Andrews to Guardbridge are on road. The walking here is easy and the views panoramic over the Eden Estuary, abundant with birdlife. From Guardbridge you turn back to the coast and soon you're on the open and wild expanse of Earls Hall Muir before entering Tentsmuir Forest. Boardwalks help you across the wet flushes of the muir. Look out for dragonflies, damselflies, butterflies, birds and bees. The forest is home to red squirrels, roe deer, crossbill and woodpeckers. Emerge from the woods to Tayport Heath and clear views over the saltmarsh.

From Tayport, the disused railway line, now a tarmac cycleway leads you along the Firth of Tay towards your destination Newport-on-Tay. Two lovely little lighthouses, now private homes, can be admired from the path. Back into mature woodland for a time before emerging to open countryside and the Tay Road Bridge takes prominence.

The Bridge marks the end of your Fife Coast Path Adventure. All that remains is to head to your accommodation for a well-earned rest.

Additional Days

We can arrange extra nights at any of the overnight stops, allowing for rest days, or giving you more time to explore the locality. We recommend Elie and St Andrews:

Elie

If sandy beaches are your thing, then why not reward yourself with a rest day at Elie? Situated at the eastern half of a mile long south-facing sandy bay, Elie is a lovely location to relax and recharge. The town itself is charming and a pleasure just to potter around and enjoy a pot of tea!

Just a mile inland is the pretty village of Kilconquhar whose loch is a site of special scientific interest.

St Andrews

Add an extra day to savour St Andrews. Famous for its many golf courses, including the Old Course, with the landmark Swilcan Bridge at the 18th hole. You can learn all about the history of the game at The British Golf Museum.

Take time to explore the ruins of St Andrews Castle, with its medieval bottle dungeon. Not too far from the castle is the University of St Andrews, founded in 1413. The Museum of the University of St Andrews (MUSA) displays thousands of artefacts, including medieval maces and stained glass, and covers student life through the ages. Remaining with architecture, the ruins of St Andrews Cathedral, built between the 12th and early 14th centuries is well worth a visit.

Accommodation

Good accommodation and friendly hosts are an essential part of any holiday. We understand this and go out of our way to find the best. We put a great deal of effort into hand picking our accommodation and matching it to individual customer requirements. In selecting the accommodation, we look for helpful, friendly hosts with good quality, characterful accommodation close to the trail. For example, over the course of your trip you might stay in a village inn, a bed and breakfast in a converted barn, a Victorian guest house, and on a working farm.

We always try to arrange en suite accommodation, i.e. rooms with their own bathrooms, for each night of your stay. However, in some of the more remote locations accommodation is limited and occasionally we may have to book rooms with shared bathrooms for one or two nights of your holiday, (especially if the booking is made at short notice), but we will always let you know if this is likely to be the case.

Single Rooms

We are happy to book single rooms on this walk but cannot normally book more than two for any one group. Single room bookings include a supplement.
