The Gower Peninsula

The Gower Peninsula in South Wales was designated as the UK's first Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty way back in 1956, and to this day, remains as beautiful as ever. It was awarded its AONB status for its classic coastline, much of which is defined as Heritage Coast, along with its outstanding natural environment, with over 30% of the area being a National Nature Reserve or a Site of Special Scientific Interest.

Our holidays follow the Wales Coast Path for 45 miles / 72 km from the village of Pen-Clawdd on the Loughor Estuary round to the town of Mumbles on the western edge of Swansea Bay. On your journey you will enjoy some of the most stunning sections of the Wales Coast Path and several of the most beautiful beaches in Britain.

Whiteford Sands is a two mile stretch of secluded beach backed by Whiteford Burrows, a dune system and coniferous plantation. Among the flora on display is the early marsh orchid and fen orchid. On the eastern edge of the burrows the marsh is home to the oystercatcher, pintail and golden plover. Award winning Rhossili Bay boasts three miles of gorgeous golden sands and each year in the fields above the bay the National Trust plant a staggering half a million sunflowers, poppies, lavender and lupins all bursting with colour in summer. Three Cliffs Bay, appropriately named on account of the three sea cliffs that jut out into the bay, is another beach lover's dream, a paradise of surf washed sands. Above the bay is Pennard Burrows, arguably one of the finest viewpoints in the country.

It's not all sea and sand however, the Gower Peninsula is a wealth of inspiring landscapes. Just wait till you see the dramatic limestone cliffs and ancient coastal woodlands, the rolling grasslands and russet coloured downs. There is in excess of a thousand archaeological sites and over a hundred listed buildings. More than this, there is a warm Welsh welcome wherever you go.

Grade

Easy to Moderate

This is a coastal walk, not technically difficult, and if walked at a comfortable pace, can be completed by people with limited walking experience. There are ascents and descents between the sandy bays and grassy limestone clifftops. Exploring the rocky promontories is optional.

Terrain: A coastal path mainly through farmland and over grassy cliff tops, with stretches along sandy beaches and short sections on quiet roads.

What's it like underfoot? Generally good paths and tracks, although a few sections can get muddy after heavy rain.

How Much Up & Down? There are occasional ascents and descents to and from sea level.

Signposting: The Wales Coast Path is clearly signed and waymarked with its own distinctive logo.

Navigation: Pretty straightforward. In addition to the official guide, the Wales Coastal Path is marked on the Ordnance Survey map

The Route

Penclawdd to Llanmadoc

The walk begins in the former industrial village of Pen-clawdd, which in the seventeenth century was a fairly significant port, exporting among other things coal and copper, often on locally built ships. By late nineteenth century this had changed as a shift in the River Loughor's main channel meant the village was only accessible by smaller boats. The newly arrived railway took on the task of exporting goods.

The route heads quickly to the village of Crofty before opening to a rural landscape and you're introduced to Gower's designated Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty. Field paths and marshland lead the way to Llanmadoc with the vast Llanrhidian Marsh permanently by your side. The village of Llanrhidian itself is pretty and is home to several historic buildings. An ideal location for a mid-way break. A slight detour would lead to Weobley Castle, a fortified manor house with magnificent views over the salt marsh. Llanrhidian Marsh gives way to Landimore Marsh and you pass beneath the impressive rocky outcrop of North Hill Tor before crossing Burry Pill with the help of huge stepping stones and onto

w: www.mickledore.co.uk

Llanmadoc. It's worth noting that at high water, the stepping stones are covered and a 1¼ mile/2 km diversion is required.

Llanmadoc to Rhossili

Llanmadoc takes its name from St Madoc, a sixth century saint, possibly of Irish origin and a pupil of St David and St Cenydd. The village's church, dedicated to Madoc, dates back to the thirteenth century and is the smallest in Gower.

The walk to Rhossili combines cliffs, marshland, woodland and undoubtedly some of Gower's finest beaches, including of course, Rhossili Bay. First up is Whiteford Burrows leading to Whiteford Point, the site of the now disused cast iron lighthouse. The lighthouse, built in 1865 is safer viewed from a distance as rapid incoming tides can quickly surround you. The Point is a 3,000 acre National Nature Reserve comprising dunes, beach, salt marsh and woodland. In spring and early summer rare butterflies and wildflowers colour the dunes. Whiteford Sands stretch round to Broughton Bay and the small tidal island of Burry Holms.

If the tide permits, consider crossing the short causeway onto Burry Holms to view the remains of the small medieval hermitage dedicated to St Cenydd. It's thought that Burry Holms may once have been a base for Viking raiders. It's also believed to have been the site of an Iron Age fort and earlier still a seasonal camp for Mesolithic hunters. Well worth a visit.

Three unbroken miles of golden sandy beach now sweep round to the small village of Rhossili on the southwestern tip of the Peninsula. Rhossili Bay is one of the most spectacular beaches in Britain. Above the bay is Rhossili Down. The walk along the crest of the ridge is considered one of the finest on the peninsula, particularly in late summer when the colour of the heather is at its most striking.

Rhossili to Oxwich

At Rhossili, all eyes are drawn to Worms Head. The iconic tidal headland, a nature reserve, is connected to the mainland by a rocky causeway for two and half hours at low tide. The end is two kilometers away and involves a little scrambling which some may find difficult. The going can be slow, therefore anyone set on reaching the end will need to be mindful of the time. Worms Head is not part of the Wales Coast Path.

Sticking with the path, this section of the Gower Peninsula serves up some of the most stunning coastal walking the country has to offer. Grassy clifftops interspersed with dramatic narrow valleys lead to Port Eynon. Beyond Port Eynon Bay the path passes beneath low lying limestone cliffs to Oxwich Point. It's here you reach Oxwich National Nature Reserve and head into Oxwich Wood, a long strip of coastal woodland, emerging eventually to the sandy surf washed beach that is Oxwich Bay.

Oxwich to Mumbles

Oxwich Bay, as with Rhossili Bay and Broughton Bay before it, is a sweeping expanse of golden sand, backed with dunes and punctuated with a rocky outcrop. Great Tor is an immense and imposing rock face of limestone dividing the Oxwich Bay from Three Cliffs Bay at high tide.

Above Three Cliffs Bay stands Pennard Burrows and upon it, the ruins of Pennard Castle. The views over the bay from here are often cited as being among the best in the country.

From here grassy tops above dramatic limestone cliffs lead all the way to the surfing beach of Caswell Bay.

It's onto the headlands again before one last opportunity to build a sandcastle at Langland Bay ahead of your final push onto Mumbles Head and your stroll into town marking the end of your Gower Peninsula adventure.

Accommodation

Good accommodation and friendly hosts are an essential part of any holiday. We understand this and go out of our way to find the best. We put a great deal of effort into hand picking our accommodation and matching it to individual customer requirements. In selecting the accommodation, we look for helpful, friendly hosts with good quality, characterful accommodation close to the trail. For example, over the course of your trip you might stay in a village inn, a bed and breakfast in a converted barn, a Victorian guest house, and on a working farm. Occasionally we may use a chain hotel.

We always try to arrange en suite accommodation, i.e. rooms with their own bathrooms, for each night of your stay. However, in some of the more remote locations accommodation is limited and occasionally we may have to book rooms with shared bathrooms for one or two nights of your holiday, (especially if the booking is made at short notice), but we will always let you know if this is likely to be the case.

Single Rooms We are happy to book single rooms on this walk but cannot normally book more than two for any one group. Single room bookings include a supplement.
