Pembrokeshire Coast Path

Within the Pembrokeshire Coast National Park in South Wales, the Pembrokeshire Coast Path is one of the UK's well established National Trails. Following the stunning, rugged Welsh coastline, this is one of the finest long distance walks in Britain. The path enjoys stunning views across sea and land as it twists along a coast line of ever-changing natural beauty.

The Pembrokeshire Coastal Path is a varied and at times challenging walk. The undulating nature of some parts of the walk presents physically demanding ascents and descents, however it can be enjoyed in shorter sections accessible to walkers of all ages and abilities.

Bird watchers and plant lovers are drawn to the area due to the rich diversity of wildlife to be seen. Sea birds thrive on the inaccessible cliffs and offshore islands and, due to a multitude of habitats, an amazing array of flowers and plants can be seen at all times of year.

Essential Info

Length	5 - 17 nights
Full Route Length	186 miles / 299 km
Shortest Break Length	48 miles / 77 km

Average Grade

Moderate to Challenging

This is not a technically difficult walk and should be easy to tackle for most reasonably fit people. The paths are good, and there are no major route finding challenges.

Terrain: A coastal path mainly through farmland and moorland on the cliff tops, with stretches along sandy beaches.

What's it like underfoot? Generally good paths and tracks, although a few sections can get muddy after heavy rain.

How Much Up & Down? More than you'd think! Although you never reach more than 200m above sea level (and most of the time not more than 100m) there are many short steep sections. On completion you will have ascended more than the height of Everest! Most days involve ascents of 200-500m metres, although no section is very steep for very long.

Signposting: Good - the path is well way marked.

Navigation: Pretty straightforward – good signposting, and generally well defined tracks.

The Route

Amroth to Angle: Beaches, villages, coves, cliffs and gun fire!

The beautiful beaches and tourist attractions around Tenby make this the busiest section of the whole route with superb views of Caldey Island, and the coasts of The Gower and Exmoor. This section really typifies why this coast is worthy of National Park status. It contains Barafundle beach which was recently voted one of the top ten beaches in the world! It also fringes the famous Lily Ponds at Bosherton which are a National Nature reserve. The path is quite undulating, but you're never far from a beach or village pub. Also included is possibly the flattest section of the trail much of which is restricted because of military use. Despite being a firing range, this ranks as one of Britain's most important wildlife sanctuaries and is protected by some of Europe's strongest designations. This final part of this section is very rugged and once away from Angle village it is deliberately managed to retain a 'remote and challenging' experience. The entire stretch is coastal – no roads, no houses, few stiles and no amenities at all.

Angle to Dale: History Mixed with Modern Industry

Due to its shelter from coastal winds this stretch includes many sections of woodland. Care must be taken to check the tides in two locations to avoid long detours on roads. Unfortunately a large part of this section is not within the National Park due to the proximity of industry associated with the haven. It is however still a very interesting walk rich in history, environmental and agricultural interest. The historic town of Pembroke and its castle are well worth a visit.

Dale to Solva: Gentle to Wild to Mild

This section takes you around the Dale Peninsula which is a walk of contrasts starting in the gentle, pastoral and, in places, wooded shelter of the Milford Haven waterway and ending on the wild and treeless Atlantic coast with spectacular views of the rugged offshore islands of Skomer, Skokholm and Grassholm. The path then continues to change again as you reach strikingly red low cliffs and coastal slopes and cliff tops rich in wild flowers. In places the red of the Old Red Sandstone is brightly streaked with yellow algae. The pretty village of Solva is well worth a visit due to its situation on an old glacial water melt channel.

Solva to Porthgain: Tough, Rugged and a Cathedral

A must on this section is to visit the smallest city in Britain – St David's and it's beautiful cathedral. Make time to linger on the wild and rocky peninsular of St David's Head which abounds with archaeology and has views across to Ramsey Island. Keep an eye out too for seals in the rocky coves below the path and gannets diving for fish out to sea; you may be lucky enough to see the grey dorsal fins of porpoises hunting for fish beneath the gannets. The section between Whitesands and Abereiddi feels wild and remote with hardly a building to be seen making the cafe at Whitesands or the refreshment van at Abereiddi a welcome sight for the weary walker! This is an exhilarating and in places rugged section of path above high cliffs and beneath the dramatic craggy volcanic outcrops of Pen Beri, Carn Lleithyr and Carn Llidi.

Porthgain to Fishguard: Snake Your Way Along the Cliffs

There are plenty of dramatic sheer cliffs on this section where coastal erosion is an obvious process. Every year Pembrokeshire is a little smaller than the year before and the route of the Coast Path has to be continually reviewed to ensure safety. Mostly 30 to 70m high, the cliffs are of volcanic origin – gently rounded cliffs where the rock is strong and hard, sheer where there are weak strata. There are infrequent steep hills with rocky outcrops and loose volcanic stone where heather and gorse abound in a dramatic blaze of colour in August.

Fishguard to St Dogmaels: The Big Finish

The cliffs on the section from Fishguard to Newport are lower, mostly at around 40m. Although Pen Dinas rises to 142m, the level valley path (also National Trail) avoids this. Hills up from and down to the little beaches are steep but well spread out. Newport Town to St Dogmaels is the most challenging section of the Coast Path, 15.5 miles long with frequent very steep hills. There are no services between Newport Sands and Poppit. Walkers should ensure that they are properly prepared with adequate food, drink and clothing along this remote section.

Additional Days

We can arrange extra nights at any of the overnight stops, allowing for rest days, or giving you more time to explore the locality. Here are a few suggestions:

Pembroke

Pembroke is the birthplace of Henry VII and is steeped in history. The 900 year old castle is the focal point of the town, standing guard over the river and well worth a visit. The town itself was fortified and walled, and sections of these walls are still visible. Visitors can take the popular town trail and there is also a daily indoor market and numerous small craft, gift and specialist shops.

Marloes Sands

To the west of the Marloes Peninsula are the islands of Skomer, Skokholm and Grassholm which are brought to life by the thousands of sea birds which breed on the sheer cliffs. All the islands can be visited by boat from Martins Haven and guided walks are available on Skomer and Skokholm.

St David's

St David's is the smallest city in Britain - granted city status by Queen Elizabeth II because of the presence of the cathedral, St David's is in reality a small attractive village. The Cathedral has been a dominant presence since the 12th century

w: www.mickledore.co.uk

and was a popular pilgrimage destination throughout the middle-ages and indeed remains so to this day attracting thousands of visitors every year. Adjacent to the cathedral stand the magnificent ruins of the medieval Bishops Palace. Boat trips can also be taken to Ramsey Island which is the most northerly of the Pembrokeshire islands and is a wildlife reserve managed by the RSPB.

Goodwick/Fishguard

Standing on an imposing headland commanding superb views of the bay, Fishguard is the main shopping centre of north Pembrokeshire with two small supermarkets and family-run shops and businesses. The area is famous as the location of 'The Last Invasion of Britain' when in 1797 French troops landed nearby. Local heroine Jemima Nicholas captured many of the invaders single handed and the Frenchmen later negotiated their surrender at the Royal Oak inn and laid down their arms on Goodwick Sands.
